Cher KVRX,

Comme vous le savez peut-être, il est difficile de trouver votre place dans une université aussi grande que UT. Par pure chance, j'ai trouvé la radio d'une université.

Au cours des trois dernières années, KVRX m'a aidé à devenir la meilleure version de moi-même. J'ai appris à écouter à mon cœur et à trouver mes vraies passions. En tant que directrice de la musique, je peux dire honnêtement que ce travail est vraiment un rêve, comme je passe mes journées à écouter de la musique pour le travail.

Le plus important, KVRX m'a aidé réaliser les deux choses que j'estime le plus dans ma vie: l'amitié et la musique. J'ai trouvé mes chers amis ici, et j'ai écouté des chansons que je n'ai peut-être jamais entendu autrement.

En résumé, KVRX, je t'aime. Je suis reconnaissante pour des opportunités et de la croissance que vous m'avez donné et à tant d'autres.

Amicalement,
Ariel

Jazz was a music to express what other music could not. Jazz was meant to feel - to let everything out in the dramatic moments of an improvisational solo, to compose brilliance, to innovate. Nothing has changed. Now, jazz is not just a musical genre, but a philosophy. Jazz is not dead.

BORZOI

a q&a with elise barbin

Under a behemoth oil portrait of The Who, Taylor Browne and Rhys Woodruff, who make up two-thirds of post-punk outfit Borzoi, sat down to answer a few questions about their recent goings-ons. The band released their debut LP A Prayer for War on 12XU this September.

E: Welcome back to Austin. How did tour go?

Woodruff: It went really well. Definitely had the usual ups and downs. We should have realized that it was going to be that kind of pendulum swinging stuff because Austin was fantastic and Fayetteville was fantastic. But in the middle, it was Denton where we played literally in the middle of a wake. Like one of the bartenders had passed away earlier in the week and during the show, in between every band someone would come, including his fucking dad and sister, and talk about him. It was just very emotional obviously. And it was all like really sarcastic punk music. So it was just a little strange. That was day two.

ou're signed to 12XU since the last release, right? How is it working n Gerard Cosloy?

wne: It is intense talking to him sometimes because he does thing where when he's really energized in a conversation.
won't look at you but rather look to the side of you and then nstantly pivot around you, like a shark circling his pray. So at beginning of the conversation you're facing north for tance, and by the end of it you're facing southwest and it's just y disorienting. Whenever he says goodbye and you're like, here am I?" I've literally been turned around. Can you see that?
orks on numerous levels.

While you were recording the new album, you showed me a history me Instagram that you really loved and I thought about that during entire first listen of the album. Is there a reason you focused on se historical war tragedies as a theme for the album? Is that just ur writing style and sense of humor?

owne: Let me just clear the record: That history meme count, half the time is amazing and hilarious and half the time ey're not joking. Like the things they repost, it's not a joke. It's t remembering a genocide in meme format, and you're like hy would you do that?" It does get really tricky with that stuff.
ere's a lot of Country Teasers songs with the history vein of minding humans the terrible things they've done.

I associate Borzoi a lot with The Birthday Party in that way, not only cause your sound but because of your lyrics and the sense of iting about things that are kind of fucked up and bleak, but maybe in humorous way.

owne: Yeah definitely. That's one of the first bands, except for e The Fall and The Kinks that we listened to when we started.
usically, we always try to go for this frenzied style that they hit well, like you're in this fever pitch of some kind of Pentecostal rvant. Not saying that we've ever been able to get to that but s so inspiring.

E: Taylor, you directed a music video for your song "Big Pink." Tell me about that. I'm curious because a lot of bands make their own videos and maybe they shouldn't, but this turned out really well and was very thoughtfully made.

Browne: Well I definitely had the same thought that most bands should not do this. The trick is getting everyone else on your team who are much more talented than you are to do the work for you. Which is what I did with my band as well and most of my life. The original idea was from Zach [Wood, guitarist for Borzoi] who was very sober at the time and said that the song that made him think of like a game show from hell. And at the time I said that was a horrible idea. Then 15 minutes later it was like I couldn't get out of my head.

We strayed away from visual stuff for a long time because until recently, we had no idea what we wanted to be like aesthetically, or visually rather. Because nowadays, being a musician isn't really about being a musician but about hyping an image and having a good package. And that your song can suck, but if you've got good graphic design you can still be very popular. We've always wrestled with that notion because it seems so asinine to us.

E: What are your upcoming plans for the band? More touring or recording?

Woodruff: No, we're retiring. that's it. We're writing a lot right now and we're going to hopefully record some stuff by the beginning of next year. What else are we gonna do? New videos. Taylor has some ideas for a couple.

Browne: They all suck except for one where a futuristic lizard cop masturbates to an image of John Wayne. That one I'm real stoked about

* In MY day, rotation was at THREE o'clock ... not TWO!

* In MY day, "indie" rock was either PAVEMENT or MODEST MOUSE... thats IT!!

* Back when I was young the TOPLESS 39 was 39 albums long! ... and we never knew who was NUMBER 1!

Dear KVRX,

As you may know, it can be difficult to find your place at a school as big as UT. By sheer luck, I found college radio.

Over the past three years, KVRX has helped me grow into the best version of myself. I have learned to listen to my heart and find my true passions. As a Music Director, I can honestly say that this job is truly a dream, as I spend my days listening to music for work.

Most importantly, KVRX has helped me realize the two things I value most in life: friendship and music. I've found my dearest friends here, and I've listened to songs I may have never heard otherwise.

In sum, KVRX, I love you. I am thankful for the opportunities and growth that you have provided for me and so many others.

Yours,

Ariel
